er, formerly a member of the notorious James band of outlaws which infested the Western country a quarter of a century ago, committed suicide to-day by shooting. He left a letter to the press in which he gives as reasons for his act, despondency over continued ill health and separation from his friends. The suicide is supposed to have occurred about 8 o'clock this morning. Younger occupied a room in a down-town block and when he did not make his appearance as usual to-day search was made for him. About 5 o'clock this afternoon the door of his room was broken in and his dead body found stretched on the floor beside the bed, a revolver clutched in his right hand. He had shot himself through the head and evidently had been dead for Old wounds he had received earlier in life also gave him much trouble, and although he soon obtained lighter employment, his health was extremely precarious, and this caused him much worriment. He was fifty-four

On a bureau in the room was found a long manila envelope, on one side of which was written: "To all that is good and true I love and bid farewell-Jim On the other side of the envelope were these words:

"Reporters-Be my friends. Burn me The envelope contained a package of letthat had passed between Younger a woman with whom he is said to have been much in love. The woman, who is prominently connected, is said to have reciprocated his affection, and it is reported that at one time they were to have been married. Her relatives raised strenuous objections to the marriage, and a further obstacle was the fact that it was pointed out that a paroled prisoner could not legally contract a marriage. The couple determined to disregard the objections of relatives and an effort was made to over-come the other obstacle to their marriage by securing from the State Board of Pardons a full pardon and restoration to citi-This effort failed, and this, it is thought, had much to do with Younger's determination to end his life. It is also said that relations between Jim and Cole Younger were very much strained -in fact, that the brothers had not been on speaking terms for the past six months. ST. PAUL, Minn., Oct. 19.-James Younger was the youngest of three brothers-Robert, Coleman and James Younger-who between the years 1866 and 1873 gained great notoriety through their association with Jesse and Frank James. The band, headed by Jesse James, was charged with innumerable robberies of banks and railroad trains, in the execution of which many desperate encounters took place and a number of men were killed. The members of the band had served through the civil war, fighting on the side of the Confederacy with Quantrell and his guerrillas. The scene of the most of their alleged post-bellum depredations was the State of Missouri and those States adjacent thereto, but in September, 1876, was put in charge of the police depart- | the band entered Minnesota, traversing the State as far as the little town of Northfield, in Rice county. In 1889 an effort was made to secure an unconditional pardon for the brothers, it being pleaded in support of this effort that it had not been proved that either of the prothers had fired the shot that killed Cashier Heywood, and a further plea for mercy was based upon the ground that "Bob" Younger was dying of consumption. petitions being signed by leading men in all walks of life, both citizens of this State and of Missouri. Among those who made especial plea to secure the granting of the pardon was Senator Elkins, of West Virginia, who, it is said, had known the prothers well in the days before the war. It is also related that the senator's life was saved during the civil war through the efforts of Cole Younger. Elkins had been captured by Quantrell's guerrillas and had been sentenced to be shot, but Younger connived at his escape from the gang and succeeded in restoring him to his regiment. All efforts for securing an unconditional pardon having failed, a bill was introduced in the State Legislature in 1901 empowering the State Board of Pardons to grant paroles to life prisoners who had served twenty-five years or more. The bill was hard fought, but finally passed both branches of the Legislature and was sent to Governor Van Sant for his signature. The Governor had three days within which to sign or veto the bill, failing which the act would become a law without his signature. Before the three days had expired the House recalled the bill and did not return it to the Governor until the time for approval had elapsed. The state pardoning board, however, of which the chief justice of the State is a member, decided that the bill had become a law without the signature of the Governor, and on July 10, 1901, on recommendation of the Board of Prison Commissioners, a parole was granted to Coleman and James Younger, and on July 14 they were released. Under the terms of the parole the brothers were not to leave the State, and since their release they have been engaged in business of various sorts. James Younger has suffered much from old wounds, and several months ago an operation was per-ST. PAUL, Minn., Oct. 19 .- James Young- formed for the removal of a rifle ball from Senator Fairbanks Has One Pat to the Situation.

A lot of good stories are being told by Republican campaign orators to illustrate some particular point this campaign, and they are usually at the expense of the Democracy. Senator Fairbanks has a story. which he tells particularly well, that tends to show the incapability of the Democratic party to run the government.

The story deals with an incident that has to do with a Western railway strike. The great road was idle and not a wheel was turning. The master mechanic, despairing of a settlement with the strikers, inserted an advertisement in the newspapers offering employment to engineers. Among the men who saw the advertisement was a skilled engineer employed on the Pennsylvania line who thought he would like to try Western life. Another who saw the 'ad" was the engineer of a stationary engine at a logging camp in the Northwest. "Dick" thought he would like to try railroad engineering, so he went to one of his fellow-workmen, showed him the advertisement and declared his intention of answering it in person. His fellow-worker, whose name was "Joe," sought to dissuade him from the attempt, telling him he would probably make a mess of the whole business. He was sure his utter lack of experience would not interfere and he told his friends good-bye and set out for Kansas City. He and the skilled engineer from the Pennsylvania line turned up in the master mechanic's office about the same time The latter took it that they were both experienced and employed them. He invited them out into the yards and thought he would try their skill. To the Pennsylvania engineer he said: "Take this engine and run that cut of cars down on the switch below the yards." The old engineer stepped into the engine cab, where the fireman had a good head of steam, and took hold of the lever. The engine puffed and trembled like some living creature and then slowly started forward. The master mechanieyed the moving engine and congratulated himself on having procured at least one man of experience. To the engineer from the logging camp he also gave instructions. "Take this engine," he said, pointing to a fine passenger locomotive, "and run it into the roundhouse; there will be no need of it to retreat. He stepped into the cab and took hold of the throttle. He gave it a jerk and the engine jumped forward with all the violence of a spirited animal struck with a lash. It shot forward through the doors of the roundhouse, but at an opportune moment and just in time to save the engine from crashing into the wall on the opposite side the engineer reversed his lever. The locomotive shot backward out of the roundhouse, and again he reversed the lever. Again it sped forward into the house and a third time the thing was reversed. As the locomotive backed out again at terrific speed the master mechanic, who had been looking with wild-eyed wonder, shouted to the frightened engineer: "You fool, you! what are you doing? You fool, what are you doing?" The engineer shouted back: "I had it in there twice. Why didn't you shut the door?"

FIRE INSURANCE AGENTS.

PATROLMAN TOMLINSON ACCIDENT. ALLY SHOT BY A FRIEND.

The Accident Occurred in the Maine Woods Where Party Was Hunting-Not Fatal.

George H. Tomlihson, a patrolman on the city police force, was shot and severely but not dangerously wounded last Thursday night while out with a hunting party in Maine. He was moonlight hunting and was mistaken for a deer and shot by James Sutphen, a lunch wagon man of this city. The party had a special car, and after a long ride of eighteen miles in a buckboard to the station he was placed aboard and brought home. The car was connected with the Lake Erie & Western excursion at Peru last night and brought to this city. The city ambulance met the train at the Massachusetts-avenue station at midnight va street. He began to feel easier a few minutes after being placed in bed at home, and the wound is not expected to make

The hunting party, composed of twenty-three members, left Indianapolis Sept. 2 for Maine. It was in camp twelve miles east of Jackman, Me., when the accident happened. Last Thursday the party finished hunting, and Thursday night were preparing to break camp early Friday morning and return home. The three guides had been paid paid off and were sitting about conversing with members of the party. It was a bright moonlight night, and one of the guides said it was the best night he had seen for many months for hunting deer. This made Sutphen eager, Tomlinson said, and he wanted to take a trip for deer. Tomlinson reluctantly consented and they started out. About five minutes before the accident Tomlinson said he and Sutphen were standing in a road, and Sutphen remarked that it was a good law in Maine that imposes a fine of $100 and ten years' imprisonment for persons guilty of shooting unless they know what they are shooting at. The men separated, and in a few minutes Sutphen saw Tomlinson down the road, became cited, thinking it was a deer, and fired. "soft nose" which spreads after striking an object, and the flesh was badly torn. There were a half dozen physicians in the party so that Tomlison did not suffer for lack of medical attention. The next morning after the accident he was compelled to ride eighteen miles strapped in a back-

The Mail Clerk's Quick Thinking Saved a Comrade.

A mail clerk who worked in the same car with F. H. Hermsen, who was killed in the Vandalia wreck at Reelsville last Wednesday, says he owes his life to Hermsen. The man who was saved gives the following account of the wreck:

"I owe my life to Hermsen. When he heard the terrible noise caused by reversing the engine and the breaks being suddenly applied he rushed for the door, and, throwapplied he rushed for the doer, and, throwing it open, called to me, 'My God, we are in a wreck! Jump!' I sprang to the door, and while he held it open I jumped out. I cannot realize why he did not jump. It must have been that the jolting of the car threw him off his feet and the accident occurred before he recovered himself, or that he lost his grip on the sliding door and that it closed on him. It might have been that the collison occurred just as I jumped an that he had no time to get out of the car."
Hermsen's funeral was held in Greencastle and was largely attended. Among the floral tributes was a beautiful design contributed by the Protective Association of Railway Mail Clerks, bearing the letters R. M. S. and the number 4326, Hermsen's number.

Girl's Queer Actions.

A well-dressed white girl, who says her name is Louise Keeny, and that her home tailed to investigate the case and Devlin's | is in Austin, Ill., was arrested last night by Bicycle Policemen Lowe and Trimpe. It is thought the girl is deranged. Complaint against her was made yesterday afternoon by Dr. Furniss, a colored physician on West New York street. He said he had been troubled by the girl, who persisted in calling him up by telephone and asking him to go to St. Vincent's Hospital. She also called at the doctor's office several times and asked for prescriptions. When the doctor gave them to her she wou throw them on the floor and tell him sh did not care for them.
